If I had a restaurant in DC, I'd open with a big sign that said "MAGA WELCOME!" It'd be a southern bbq place, too. Yeah...

Big money opportunity. Patriots want more than beef jerky and trail mix (which they should definitely bring anyways).

On that note, trail mix and warm socks/gloves will be worth their weight in gold. Bring some to sell if you're an enterprising asshole, or a ton to share if you're investing patriot. Just be there with stock.

Rain coats, hand warmers, sterile gauze, flashlights, hats, masks and matches are all cheap and easy to stock up on as well.

Price gouging during a high energy protest is a good way to get beat but it's hard to be upset about fair prices for good service. That's pretty damn American.

Also might not be a bad idea to bring some basic medical gear incase we 1776 and we have to fight our way up the steps of congress. Things like quick clot and tornequettes

It's supposed to be 50 degrees here on the 6th, and I think still above freezing overnight.

Fuck that! We need to butcher some pigs and have a giant hog roast in front of the capital! Where are the pedes that can help pull this shit together???

This is one concern my wife brought up. Approximately 2 million patriots show up. If there isn't at least 1,000 portables around it's gonna be 2-3 hour waits for the restroom.

Food trucks already take up nearly every free parking space in DC as it is. I really hate those things because it means I have to pay for parking whenever I drive into town.
